The building, which was the old Tivoli hotel, was two stories high. Columbus, June 23 .- It is reported hat Otto C. Marckworth, former chemist for the Capital City Dairy company, whose officials are on trial in the federal court on a charge of defrauding the government out of millions of dollars in oleomargarine tax, will aid the government in the prosecutions. Mr. Marckworth is among those under indictment in the oleo cases. Judge Sater overruled the motion of the defense for a continuance on the ground that the publication of a statement by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo had prejudiced prospective jurors. The court held that this could be ascertained in the examination of jurors themselves.

Columbus, June 23.-Governor Willis appointed .H. L. Eliot of Delaware to succeed Professor M. B. talions of infantry and the governor's horse guards remain on duty in the vicinity of Governor John M. Slaton's home on Peachtree road. Martial law prevailed within a radius of a half mile of the home and a tented city was thrown up.

While there is a warlike appearance about the Slaton home, there is no enemy in sight and there has been none since the last members of the crowd that had been besieging the governor's home vanished before a charge by the troops hurriedly summoned to the scene. There are no indications that the attack will be renewed on the governor's home, but the troops were kept on duty as a precaution.

Governor Slaton plainly shows the effects of the strain he has been un der. He seems years older and he has a haggard look due to the loss of sleep. "I am confident that my decision in the Frank case was right," said the governor, "and time will vindicate me. Believing as I do, I could not have done otherwise. When the people of Georgia are calmer and when they study my statement they will agree with me.

There were rumors that a great demonstration will be made against Governor Slaton Saturday when he retires from office and Judge Nate Harris is inaugurated.

At the state prison at Milledgeville, Leo Frank stated he is happy that ais life was saved. He added: "Time will prove, as I have often said, the fact of my absolute innocence of the murder with which I am charged."

It is apparent that the Russians are evacuating the Galician capital, Only a rear guard now remains to oppose the great mass of men and guns desides. The main body of the Russian armies, with war material and artillery, has been removed over the railroad which runs to Brody. The victors will find a repetition of their prize at Przemysl, an empty town.

The latest bulletin given out by the German war office told of the acvances of the Germans and Austrians. "The Russians have been defeated all along the line," said the statement. "They are fighting only to gain time and save their war material and artillery. The main positions of their army have been attacked by the forces of Generals Von Mackensen, Von Linsingen, Woyrach, Boeh-Ermolli and Von Pflanzer.'

It was thought in some quarters that the advance guard of Von Mackensen's army, which is operating under the eyes of the kaiser, has entered the city itself.

An enormous success is promised for the new British war loan. Subscriptions are pouring in at a rate far in excess of the rate in November. There is a general desire on the part of the holders of the November issue and of consuls to convert their holdings into the new issue.

The house of commons passed the exportation restriction bill, waich is designed to stop British exportations to neutral countries from reaching the enemy. The main features of the bill restrict consignments to Holland to the Netherlands overseas trust, which has undertaken to prevent anything saipped from reaching England's eaemies. Similar arrangements are to be made with other governments.

Desperate Fighting at Arras.

Interest in the fighting on the Galician battlefields has been offset by the declaration that near Arras fighting is taking place that may decide the fate of France.

Berlin makes this announcement: "Reports from neutral sources declare that the battle raging near Arras may decide the fate of France. Both sides fight with unheard of courage and heroism. The French are very strong. The Germans continuously receive reinforcements. Reports from Dutch sources state that the French losses are fearful. The hospitals at Amiens and Abbeville are overcrowded.'

New York, June 23 .- At least three committees of importers, composed of five men each, will go to Washington, probably some day this week, to see Secretary of State Robert Lansing and urge him to make representations to the warring nations of Europe to permit greater freedom of trade in noncontraband. The protest will be general and will not be directed specifically against Great Britain, although the importers feel that Great Britain through her order in council of last March has worled them greater havoc than any other belligerent.

Philadelphia, June 23 .- The proposal put forward by former President Taft and others to enforce universal peace by the establishment of an international police force was characterized as "fantastic and nonsensical" by Senator Penrose in an address before the Sons of Veterans. Mr. Pen rose declared that a larger navy and better coast defenses are the only means by which the United States can maintain peace and at the same time uphold the honor and integrity of the country. Paris, June 23.-Further advances by the French in the invasion of Alsace are announced in the official communiques. After the capture of Metzeral the French moved eastward, north and south of the village, driving the Germans to the east bank of the Fecht. The success of this operation is admitted by the German war office. Apparently the Germans have abandoned the town of Sondernach, on the southern branch of the Fecht, a few miles south of Metzeral. In this region the French reports tell of heavy fighting and the capture of three ma chine guns. The heavy artillery of the French has located the German gun which has been bombarding Dunkirk at long range and efforts are now being made to put the piece out of action. Fifteen more shells were thrown into the channel port by the Germans.

"Economy Expert" Is Caught

The people of Ohio, especially those who enjoy and appreciate the humorous side of this serious life, are indebted to the Auditor of State for furnishing them with some real genuine humor.

The real comedy in public life was staged this way. One M. L. Fawcett who, with his chief, has been busy posing in various sections of the state as a real all wool and a yard wide economy efficiency expert—one of those precious youngsters who knows just exactly what every one else should do and how they should do it without knowing anything at all about the duties of the other men, one of the bright boys who fixes the compensation of the other fellows and furnishes "items' for the newspapers-was caught in his own net. Of course the Auditor of State hauled in the net and landed his fish.

Fawcett turned in an expense account which included sev eral items of expense for livery hire and taxicab hire-convey ances used by the economy expert between hotels and depots.

The matter of fact force in the State Auditor's office couldn't see just why a real economy efficiency expert couldn't practice what he had so loudly preached and refused to pay the account.

The incident furnishes an amusing expose of the "real merit" back of the economy efficiency expert propaganda. It has its serious side also which is worthy of consideration and presents a question which the people of Ohio should consider.

Is it a good thing for the public service to have a squad of inexperienced youngsters running at large, commenting publicly on the expenses of other departments and the work CRAZY WITH CORN PAIN? of public officials when they do not know how to conduct themselves.

There is no doubt that the expenditure of the public funds foot lumps, those hard patches on the to give him to the rum serpent we should be guarded carefully and practical economy followed scrupulously but it is equally true that there should be an end to this playing to the grand stand and giving out false missed in not buying this safe deimpressions by youngsters who should be in school—some of Dealers everywhere sell Putnam's them evidently in the Kindergarten.

The state administration should put a quietus on this economy efficiency expert force before the public service is made to suffer more than it has in public esteem.

These youngsters, fresh from some correspondence school course or perhaps, honestly enthusiastic over a theory advanced in some magazine article, have that assurance which goes with ignorance and do not hesitate to lay down rules and regulations for the management of any department from the gov ernor's office and the Supreme Court down through the entire list and yet they lack enough practical knowledge to make out a proper expense account, even according to their own theories.

It is time that a halt be called on this already too long continued farce and the Auditor of State is entitled to a vote of thanks for furnishing an expose which gives the people a good laugh and at the same time exhibits the utter folly of the whole scheme.

The Boy and His Vacation

This is the time of year-vacation season-when the small boys come into their own.

Free from the burden of study and the discipline and confinement of the school room they are free to roam in the woods, hunt, fish, go swimming, play base ball, camp out and do any or all of the hundred and one things so dear and so real to a boy.

Of course the effects of the poison ivy, the stone bruise. the sore toe and the sun burned back come along as alloy in the season of pleasure but the youngsters expect all of those ills. They are part of the game of summer life and part of the education of the coming man who must take the bitter with sweet even in happy vacation time.

The boy who has not had his full quoto of the ills, injuries and inconveniences of vacation time really feels that he has been overlooked. The boy with the sore toe is the envy of his playmates and the boy who is compelled to sleep face down because of a blistered back is the admired of all fellows.

In these vacation times even the tortures of having a good time are a joy to childhood. Everything is all right and every thing as it comes along is received with enthusiasm and pleasure. The small boy in vacation time is the real optimist of per cent paid on time deposits. the creation.

The quotation "No gentleman would insult me; none other can," is credited to John Quincy Adams, who is said to have made the reply when he was told that a man had spoken to him so rudely that he ought to send a challenge to a duel, and it is said also to have been used by Senator W. CHOOSING MUTTON.

Rules to Guide Those Who Want to B Careful Buyers.

Mutton is generally considered the most healthful meat and is eaten by many to the exclusion of any variety, consequently great care should be ex ercised in the selection, and a little time should be given to the study of

In buying mutton or lamb care should be taken to see that the fat is clear, hard and white, as mutton with soft or yellow fat indicates too long a stay in cold storage. It might appear that a great quantity of fat on mutton signifies waste, but the lean part is much juicler and more tender when this is the case, so the wise housewife makes purchases with this in view.

The leg has the least fat in proportion to weight. Next comes the shoulder. The color of lean mutton is a deep red. Lamb is good to eat when a year old and is much more digestible than other immature meat, such as veal or young pork. The wise housewife knows the value of nutrition, so she will hesitate about buying lamb merely because it is in the market, as it is generally expensive.

The meat of spring lamb should be a clear pink, with plenty of pure white fat.-New York Sun.

FIRST ARMY MEDAL.

It Was Issued After Cromwell Defeated the Scots In 1650. The first medal issued as a reward for military service was struck by or der of parliament to celebrate a vic tory of English troops over the Scotch When the news reached London that Cromwell had defeated the Scots at Dunbar on Sept. 3, 1650, the house of commons instructed Thomas Simon. and honeysuckle vines and bird houses chief engraver to the mint, to proceed to Edinburgh and design a medal in locality a pride to their owners .- House honor of the event, of which a leading feature should be a portrait of the vic torious general.

The result was a lifelike portrait of Cromwell in profile, and over his head is engraved the battle cry of his ironsides, "The lord of hosts." On the reverse there is a wonderful representa tion in miniature of the house of commons in session. This medal was given to all officers and privates alike who fought in Scotland, but this democratic practice was discontinued till revived in 1815 at the suggestion of the Duke of Wellington for the troops under his command at Waterloo.-London Tele-

Antiquity of Fishing.

Probably no branch of industry can lay claim to greater antiquity than that of fishing. Its origin would seem to be roeval with the earliest efforts of human ingenuity, for the oldest monuments of antiquity show the fisherman tu full possession of the implements of his calling, and even those tribes of savages which have learned neither to keep flocks nor to till the fields are skilled in the fabrication of the hook the fish spear and the net. The earliest civilization of the eastern Mediterranean was begun with fishing. Sidon, which means "fishery," was originally a fishing village, and its enterprising inhabitants devoted their attention mainly to the collection of a certain kind of mollusks, from which they prepared the famous tyrian purple, prized more highly for the richness and variety of its hues than any other dye known to the ancients

Transforming Clothesline Posts.

A suburban resident grew tired of the wooden clothesline posts in his back yard. He incased them in chicken wire netting and planted sprouts of honeysuckle around the posts. He then nailed a little bird house to the top of each. In a short time the honeysuckle had completely covered the unsightly posts and a pair of bluebirds built s nest in one of the houses. Many of this man's neighbors took up the idea, now make the clothesline posts of his

THREE INQUISITIVE SCOTS.

And How They Happened to Originate the Jute Industry. James Logie, who is supposed to know more about jute than any one else in America, tells in a very interesting way how jute came to be known to Europe and the west: three Dundee flax spinners were walk "In 1840, on a Saturday afternoon, ing to their beautiful residences in Broughty Ferry, about four miles east of Dundee, on the banks of the Tay. and as usual strolled along the docks. At that time there were several Clipper line sailing vessels trading with Dundee in Indian products, principally grain, linseed, etc., and on this particular Saturday one of these vessels was discharging her miscellaneous cargo, and these canny Scots observed a fibre in some quantity on the dock and made inquiry as to what it was.

"They were told it was some Indian product that had been obtained in Bengal, and was suitable for the dunnage of ships. They examined the fibre a little more carefully and all thought it would be possible to spin the fibre on their flax machinery. The result was that Monday morning they made a bee line for the agents of the ship and asked what they were going to do with this waste material.

"They got the reply, 'We propose dumping it into the river,' and when they expressed a wish to experiment with it they were told they could cart it away from the dock and were welcome to it if they paid the cartage. Thus the jute industry started-for the fiber turned out to be nothing less than what we know commercially today as 'jute.' "-Exchange.

A PAIR OF SHOESTRINGS.

The Matter of Length and How to Tie a Bowknot That Will Hold. A shoestring is "six-fourths" long when one does not specify the length required. "Six-fourths of what?" is likely to be the question put by the layman. When a man buys a new pair of shoes the strings in them are just long A. Mr. David Craig's car will be the enough. When he buys the next pair of shoestrings they are too long. The single rank column in the rear of strings that come with the shoes are four-fourths long, the next pair will be six-fourths unless the purchaser asks for and can get four-fourths.

These lengths have to do with men's high shoes. There is not the same trouble in the case of low shoes.

Some shoestrings will wear a long time, but they will become brown. Others will not wear so long, but will retain their original blackness. The strong strings that turn brown are of linen or very strong cotton. The others are of mixed fibers that hold their Many people prefer the less durable

Sunshine and Dust.

There is more dust in the places illuminated by the sun's rays than in those which we call shady. If you look along a beam of light as it streams through a window or a chink in the door you will see innumerable dust particles dancing about in the light. You will be told by most persons that there is just as much dust in the nonilluminated parts of the room as in the more favored spaces, but you cannot see the particles because the rays do not fall directly upon them. You will think that this is eminently plausible. but it is not the case. The sun falling upon the air creates irregular currents. and these currents stir up the dust and collect it in layers along the line of light; hence there is more dust where the sun shines than elsewhere .- Exchange.

Bird and a Bivalve.

At first thought it is hard to imagine how a clam could endanger the life of a bird. That such a strange circumstance is not impossible is shown by the following incident:

A settler on one of the small islands Vancouver was returning to his home by way of a beach of hard sand when he reheld an unusually large lock of searnils gathered in a compact mass and beating with beaks and wings mon the sand. Evidently they were attacking some enemy. Overhead dozens of gulls wheeled and screamed in evident excitement.

The settler was almost upon the fighting birds before they burst apart and flew, chattering, toward the clouds. One, however, lay flapping upon the ground, and the man saw that a monster clam held the gull's beak in a viselike grip. It was too heavy for the Each meeting is largely attended, bird to fly away with, and for all the gull's frantic struggles it could not loosen the clam's tenacious grip.

Bell of Indianapolis, Samuel Parrott, chief of police, and 125 other city officials, appointees and employes were indicted by the Marion county grand jury for alleged conspiracy to violate the election laws at the county primary in May and the general election in November, 1914, the action was evidently not unexpected by the majority of the men involved, for the work of furnishing bonds ranging from $2. 500 to $10,000 and engaging counsel came almost simultaneously.

Prominent Republicans are among the bondsmen. Charles W. Miller former United States district attorney here, is one of a number of prominent lawyers to represent the defendants. Neither Mr. Taggart nor Mr. Bell the others involved were similarly reticent. Judge Collins of criminal court said that the question of arraigning the defendants in the election conspiracy cases would not be taken up until next week.

The indictments created a sensation. While it has been rumored on the streets for some time that a number of men were to be indicted as a result of an investigation of the last election, it was not thought men so high in political councils would be included. Not more than a dozen spectators were in court when the grand jurors, accompanied by Alvah J. Rucker, prosecutor, submitted the report. The others indicted included election officials, ward and precinct leaders. workers at the polls and voters.

Bowser, He Suffers

If Mrs. Bowser Was Only Like Some Wives!

By M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

There are some wives who weep and some husbands who are sad.

Mrs. Bowser may weep a little once a year, but Mr. Bowser's sad streaks come oftener than that.

He gets up in the morning after a refreshing sleep. He tucks away a terrupted. bearty breakfast.

He sort of hints that the cook's you? Is it a necktie or a piece of wages ought to be raised.

He even gives the cat a cheery word as he is ready to go.

He enters his office briskly, feeling that it is good to be alive, but within an hour a sadness begins to steal over he is being made to suffer. There is thank heaven!" selfishness on every hand, and he is being made to realize that he is a martyr from way back.

When he came home the other evening Mrs. Bowser and the cat were looking out of the front window. They saw him drop off the street car at the corner, and they knew that something had occurred to put him out. He came along down the walk with a scuff, scuff, scuff, his head down and his back humped up, and Mrs. Bowser else?" sighed and the cat uttered a meow. He scuffed up the steps, unlocked the door in an uncertain way, and there was no longer any doubt of what manded: would happen.

Mrs. Bowser greeted him pleasantly, but he had nothing to say. She led the way down to the dining room, and he followed without a word. She had a few little extras for dinner, but he hardly tasted the meal. He would sip at his coffee and sigh; then he would take a mouthful of potato and sigh some more; then he would look fixedly at the beefsteak, and the tears almost started from his eyes.

Mrs. Bowser was not alarmed. She had seen just such fits before. She knew what would happen as soon as they reached the sitting room, but she did not let it interfere with her appetite. Although he gazed at her with reproaches in his looks, she chattered away about trifles until the meal was New machines; rebuilt or second finished and didn't seem to notice that he wasn't enjoying himself. It was only when they had got seated for the evening that she asked:

"Has anything gone wrong with you today, Mr. Bowser?"

"You are the one who ought to know." he sternly replied as he turned

"Why, how should I know, dear?" "Perhaps you will tell me what you call that," he said as he produced a hairbrush and slammed it down on the

"That is just like you. After brushing your hair this morning you put the brush in your pocket. Mr. Bowser, you must break yourself of being so absentminded."

"And yet you, my wife-the woman who should look after me-let me go away with that brush in my pocket! You didn't care a tinker's tunk, Mrs. Bowser, whether I went away with a hairbrush or a handkerchief in my pocket. That's your wifely love and care for me! If you had been on the street car when I pulled it out and you'd have probably giggled the same as the other tomfool women did."

"Well, what else?" she asked, smiling in spite of herself.

"Look at this blamed old collar!" he thundered as he rose up. "Do you see how it's raveled out on the edges? Do you see that even a longshoreman would be ashamed to wear it?"

"I see it. Mr. Bowser. Yesterday I hunted up a lot of your old collars and put them in a bag to give away to tramps. With two dozen new collars in your dresser you went to the bag and got that one out. Why do you do > don't do 'em!" he shouted. "But if I did it's your business as a loving wife to botice them before I go away. All day long the bottoms of my trousers have been under my feet. Maybe you will tell me that I slipped out of the house last night and stole a pair belonging to a giant!"

> She rose and walked over to him and unbuttoned his vest and threw it open. Only one suspender was in sight. She pulled off his coat and found the other dangling down his back. For a moment he was beaten; then he flushed up and exclaimed;

"Yes, but why in thunder didn't you discover it this morning? I heard some fellows guying me on the street at noon, and I'll bet it was about that dangling suspender. Mrs. Bowser"-

"Take a look at this necktie, will

What do you do such things for?" "Don't lay it on to me, and don't bluff me!" he sternly exclaimed. "Womhim. Nothing whatever is right, and an, there is such a thing as divorce,

> "But if you'd apply for one it would turn out to be a mortgage on the house. Now, then, what else?" "My socks!" hoarsely whispered Mr.

Bowser as he pointed to his feet.

"What about them?" "Full of holes, crevices, chasms, ravines! They have hurt my feet all day. Look at them, guilty woman, and let the blush of shame mantle your

He sat down and took off his shoes. There were holes in the toes and heels of his socks. They were not holes which a yearling calf could have passeu through, but yet they were of respectable size and only waiting for warm showers to grow larger. Mr. Bowser looked at Mrs. Bowser with accusing expression, and she ran upstairs and returned after a moment with eight pairs of socks as fresh as "They were right there in front of your nose, but you scrabbled around and got that pair somewhere," she said. "Are the complaints ended?"

"I left my eyeglasses on the table this morning. You know I did. The cook knew I did. The blamed old yaller cat knew I did, and yet the whole caboodle of you saw me start out without them and never said a word. 1 had to go out and buy a pair before I could do any work. By John, but when I think of these things".

Mrs. Bowser passed down the hall to where his spring overcoat was hanging on the rack and, after feeling in the pockets, came back with the lost glasses in her hand and observed:

"You'll put them in the letter box some day if you don't look out. What

Mr. Bowser stood back and fixed her with his eye for a time and then point ed down to his shoes and tensely de-

"What do you call these?" "Shoes," she replied-"shoes with holes in the toes and the heels all run over. You put them on last evening when you were cleaning up the back yard, and this morning you forgot to change to the others. It was my fault. I ought to go around looking at your feet. Will you please forgive me? The cook missed a fork and a napkin after you left the table this morning. Will you look through your pockets for them? I was going to give the cook an old gown today, but I couldn't find it. Have you got it on? One of my nightdresses is strangely missing. Can you account for it? My belt with the rhinestone buckle can't be found. I don't think you could buckle it around you, but you may be using it for a stocking supporter. My last new shirt

Mr. Bowser turned on his heel and walked down the hall to his hat and then left the house. That house was no place for a martyr. Mrs. Bowser was no wife for a martyr. No one loved him. No one sympathized with him. He instinctively turned his face toward the river, but he had hardly cleared the gate when the weather got her sprinkling pot to work, and down came a shower that drove him under the nearest shade tree. He was a martyr some more.

He stood there with his back humped up and the water running down his spine, and Mrs. Bowser never came to this morning when I took the car and the door to call him in and beg his pardon. Indeed, as the rain came down ask you where I found it? I ask you harder and a policeman across the to imagine the smiles and giggles of street yelled to him to move on he heard the guilty woman singing:

> "I would not live alway; I ask not to stay"

Would be stand such treatment? Would be suffer such humiliation? No. by beeswax!

He was a martyr, but a martyr would die with his back to the wall. He was downtrodden, but let the world have a care! If die he must-"Would you please tell me if Mr. Hammerdinger lives here?" came the voice of a man at his elbow.

"No, no, consarn you-no." And when the startled man turned and fled Mr. Bowser pursued him, callwiped my mouth on the back of it ing out af every jump that he would bathe in his gore!

Washington, June 23. - The inter state commerce commission heard the opening arguments in the western ad vance rate case. In this case fortyone railroad systems operating east of New Mexico and Denver and west of the Mississippi river, including Louisiana and Texas, are petitioning for an increase in freight rates on grain and grain products, live stock, fresh meats, packing house products, fruits and vegetables and several other com modities. The proposed increases are being opposed by the state railroad commissions and the large shippers in the territory affected.

It is estimated that the increase will amount to $20,000,000 additional annually in revenues to the carriers on the commodities named. In other cases ending before the commission these carriers seek increases on other commodities and also in passenger rates which, it is claimed, in the aggregate will amount to about $100,-000,000 annually. The commission also heard from several protestants against the proposed increases on grain and grain products.

An Old Time Fourth of July Allegory

By JAMES KIRKE PAULDING ************************

OHN BULL was a choleric old fellow who held a good manor in the middle of a great mill pond and which by reason of its being quite surrounded by water was generally called Bullock island. Bull was an ingenious man, an exceedcutler and a notable weaver besides. He also brewed capital porter, ale and small beer and was, in fact, a sort of Jack-of-all-trades and good at each.

In addition to these he was a hearty fellow, a jolly companion and passably honest as the times went. But what tarnished all these qualities was an exceedingly quarrelsome, overbearing disposition, which was always getting him into some scrape or other.

The truth is he never heard of a quarrel going on among his neighbors but his fingers itched to take a part in it, so that he was hardly ever seen without a broken head, a black eye or a bloody nose.

Such was Squire Bill, as he was commonly called by the country people, his neighbors-one of those odd, testy, grumbling, boasting old codgers that never get credit for what they are because they are always pretending to be what they are not. The squire was as tight a hand to deal with indoors as out, sometimes treating his family as if they were not the same flesh and blood when they happened to differ with him in certain matters.

One day he got into a dispute with his youngest son, Jonathan, who was familiarly called Brother Jonathan. He fell upon him and beat him soundly. After this he made the house so disagreeable to him that Jonathan, though as hard as a pine knot and as tough as leather, could bear it no longer.

Taking his gun and his ax, he put himself into a boat and paddled over the mill pond to some new lands to which the squire pretended to have some sort of claim. Jonathan intended to settle the lands. When he got over he found that the land was quite in a state of nature, covered with wood and inhabited only by wild beasts.

But, being a lad of spirit, he took his ax on one shoulder and his gun on the other, marched into the thickest of the wood and, clearing a place, built a log hut. Pursuing his labors and handling his ax like a notable woodman, he in a few years cleared the land, which he laid out into thirteen good farms, and building himself a arge house, which he partly finished, began to be quite snug.

But Squire Bull, who was getting old and stingy and besides was in great want of money on account of his having lately been made to pay heavy damages for assaulting his neighbors and breaking their heads-the squire, I say, finding Jonathan was getting well to do in the world, began to be very much troubled about his welfare. So he demanded that Jonathan should pay him a good rent for the land which he had cleared and made good for some-

He made up I know not what claim against him and under different pretenses managed to pocket all Jonathan's honest gains. In fact, the poor lad had not a shilling left for holiday occasions, and had it not been for the filial respect he felt for the old man he would certainly have refused to submit to such impositions. But for all this in a little time Jonathan grew up to be very large for his age and became a tall, stout, double jointed, broad footed cub of a fellow, awkward in his gait and simple in his appearance, but having a lively, shrewd look and giving the promise of great strength when he should get his declared he was John's own boy, a true chip of the old block. Like the old squire, he was apt to be blustering and saucy, but in the main was a peaceable sort of careless fellow that let him alone. He used to dress in Ogle. Citz. phone 133. homespun trousers and always wore a linsey woolsey coat, the sleeves of like a shoulder of mutton. All of which was in consequence of his growing so fast that he outgrew his clothes.

He was rather an odd looking chap, in truth, and had many queer ways, but everybody who bad seen John Buil saw a great likeness between them and

While Jonathan was coming up in this way Bull kept on picking his pockets of every penny put into them till at last one day when the squire was even more than usually pressing in his demands, which he accompanied with threats, Jonathan started up in a passion and threw the teakettle at the old man's head.

The choleric Bull was thereupon exceedingly enraged and, after calling the poor lad an undutiful, ungrateful, ingly good blacksmith, a dexterous rebellious rascal, seized him by the collar, and forthwith a furious scuttle ensued. This lasted a long time, for the squire, though in years, was a capital boxer. At last, however, Jonathan got him under and before he would let him up made him sign a paper giving up all claim to the farms and acknowledging the fee simple to be in Jonathan

What precious associations cluster around our flag! Not alone have our fathers set up this banner in the name of God over the well won battlefields of the Revolution and over the cities shipping large quantities to North Car and towns which they rescued from despotic rule, but think where also their descendants have carried it and raised it in conquest or protection! Through what clouds of dust and smoke has it passed, what storms of shot and shell, what scenes of fire and blood-not only at Saratoga, at Monmouth and at Yorktown, but at Lundy's Lane and New Orleans, at Buena Vista and Chapultepec! It is the same glorious old flag which, inscribed with the dying words of Law: nce. "Don't give up the ship." was hoisted on Lake Erie by Commodore Perry just on the eve of his great naval victory; the same old flag which our great chieftain bore in triumph to the proud city of the Aztecs and planted upon the heights of her national palace. Brave hands raised it above the eternal regions of ice in the Arctic seas and have set it up on the summits of the lofty mountains of the distant west.

Where has it not gone, the pride of its friends and the terror of its foes? What countries and what seas has it not visited? Where has not the American citizen been able to stand beneath its guardian folds and defy the world? With what joy and exultation seamen and tourists have gazed upon its stars and stripes, read in it the history of their nation's glory, received from it the full sense of security and drawn from' it the inspirations of patriotism! By it how many have sworn fealty to their country!

What bursts of magnificent eloquence it has called forth from Webster and from Everett, what lyric strains of poetry from Drake and Holmes! How many heroes its folds have covered in death! How many have lived for it, and how many have died for it! How many, living and dying, have said in their enthusiastic devotion to its honor, like that young wounded sufferer in the streets of Baltimore, "Oh. the flag-the stars and stripes!" And wherever that flag has gone it has been the herald of a better day; it has been the piedge of freedom, of justice, of order. of civilization and of Christianity. Tyrants only have hated it, and the enemies of mankind alone have trampled it to the earth. All who sigh for the triumph of truth and righteousness love and salute it.-Rev. Albert B. Putnam.

The amen of nature is always a flower.-Holmes.

Martial law designed to stop British exportations prevailed within a radius of a half to neutral countries from reaching the mile of the home and a tented city was thrown up.

While there is a warlike appearance about the Slaton home, there is no enemy in sight and there has been none since the last members of the crowd that had been besieging the governor's home vanished before a charge by the troops hurriedly summoned to the scene. There are no indications that the attack will be renewed on the governor's home, but the troops were kept on duty as a precaution.

The French are very strong. The Germans continuously receive reinforcements. Reports from Dutch sources state that the French losses are fearful. "Economy Expert" Is Caught

The people of Ohio, especially those who enjoy and appreciate the humorous side of this serious life, are indebted to the Auditor of State for furnishing them with some real genuine humor.

The real comedy in public life was staged this way. One M. L. Fawcett who, with his chief, has been busy posing in various sections of the state as a real all wool and a yard wide economy efficiency expert—one of those precious youngsters who knows just exactly what every one else should do and how they should do it without knowing anything at all about the duties of the other men, one of the bright boys who fixes the compensation of the other fellows and furnishes "items" for the newspapers—was caught in his own net. Of course the Auditor of State hauled in the net and landed his fish.

Fawcett turned in an expense account which included sev eral items of expense for livery hire and taxicab hire-convey ances used by the economy expert between hotels and depots.

The matter of fact force in the State Auditor's office couldn't see just why a real economy efficiency expert couldn't practice what he had so loudly preached and refused to pay the account.

The incident furnishes an amusing expose of the "real merit" back of the economy efficiency expert propaganda. It has its serious side also which is worthy of consideration and presents a question which the people of Ohio should consider.

Is it a good thing for the public service to have a squad of inexperienced youngsters running at large, commenting publicly on the expenses of other departments and the work CRAZY WITH CORN PAIN? of public officials when they do not know how to conduct themselves.

There is no doubt that the expenditure of the public funds should be guarded carefully and practical economy followed scrupulously but it is equally true that there should be an end to this playing to the grand stand and giving out false missed in not buying this safe deimpressions by youngsters who should be in school—some of them evidently in the Kindergarten.

The state administration should put a quietus on this economy efficiency expert force before the public service is made to suffer more than it has in public esteem.

These youngsters, fresh from some correspondence school course or perhaps, honestly enthusiastic over a theory advance ed in some magazine article, have that assurance which goes with ignorance and do not hesitate to lay down rules and regulations for the management of any department from the governor's office and the Supreme Court down through the entire list and yet they lack enough practical knowledge to make out a proper expense account, even according to their own theories.

It is time that a halt be called on this already too long continued farce and the Auditor of State is entitled to a vote of thanks for furnishing an expose which gives the people a good laugh and at the same time exhibits the utter folly of the whole scheme.

The Boy and His Vacation

This is the time of year-vacation season-when the small boys come into their own.

Free from the burden of study and the discipline and confinement of the school room they are free to roam in the woods, hunt, fish, go swimming, play base ball, camp out and do any or all of the hundred and one things so dear and so real to a boy. Of course the effects of the poison ivy, the stone bruise. the sore toe and the sun burned back come along as alloy in the season of pleasure but the youngsters expect all of those ills. They are part of the game of summer life and part of the education of the coming man who must take the bitter with sweet even in happy vacation time.

The boy who has not had his full quoto of the ills, injuries and inconveniences of vacation time really feels that he has been overlooked. The boy with the sore toe is the envy of his playmates and the boy who is compelled to sleep face down because of a blistered back is the admired of all fellows.

In these vacation times even the tortures of having a good time are a joy to childhood. Everything is all right and every thing as it comes along is received with enthusiasm and pleasure. The small boy in vacation time is the real optimist of the creation.

You can't accumulate money without self-denial. Are you looking forward to the day when you will have all you now want and deluding yourself with the idea that you will THEN begin to accumulate money? That day will never dawn for you. Each day will bring a new want and if you continue to indulge in them your life will end in want. Indulgence today means for you future want, while self-denial today means future indulgence. CHOOSING MUTTON.

Rules to Guide Those Who Want to Be Careful Buyers.

Mutton is generally considered the most healthful meat and is eaten by many to the exclusion of any variety consequently great care should be exercised in the selection, and a little time should be given to the study of quality.

In buying mutton or lamb care should be taken to see that the fat is clear, hard and white, as mutton with soft or yellow fat indicates too long a stay in cold storage. It might appear that a great quantity of fat on mutton signifies waste, but the lean part is much juicier and more tender when this is the case, so the wise housewife makes purchases with this in view. The leg has the least fat in propor tion to weight. Next comes the shoulder. The color of lean mutton is a

FIRST ARMY MEDAL.

It Was Issued After Cromwell Defeated the Scots In 1650.

The first medal issued as a reward for military service was struck by order of parliament to celebrate a victory of English troops over the Scotch. When the news reached London that honor of the event, of which a leading feature should be a portrait of the victorious general.

The result was a lifelike portrait of Cromwell in profile, and over his head is engraved the battle cry of his ironsides, "The lord of hosts." On the reverse there is a wonderful representation in miniature of the house of commons in session. This medal was given to all officers and privates alike who fought in Scotland, but this democratic practice was discontinued till revived in 1815 at the suggestion of the Duke of Wellington for the troops under his command at Waterloo.-London Tele-

Antiquity of Fishing.

Probably no branch of industry can lay claim to greater antiquity than that of fishing. Its origin would seem to be roeval with the earliest efforts of human ingenuity, for the oldest monuments of antiquity show the fisherman in full possession of the implements of his calling, and even those tribes of savages which have learned neither to keep flocks nor to till the fields are skilled in the fabrication of the hook, the fish spear and the net. The earliest civilization of the eastern Mediterranean was begun with fishing. Sidon, which means "fishery," was originally a fishing village, and its enterprising inhabitants devoted their attention mainly to the collection of a certain kind of mollusks, from which they pre pared the famous tyrian purple, prized more highly for the richness and variety of its bues than any other dye known to the ancients.

A suburban resident grew tired of the wooden clothesline posts in his back yard. He incased them in chicken wire netting and planted sprouts of honeysuckle around the posts. THREE INQUISITIVE SCOTS.

And How They Happened to Originate the Jute Industry.

James Logie, who is supposed to know more about jute than any one else in America, tells in a very interesting way how jute came to be known to Europe and the west: "In 1840, on a Saturday afternoon, three Dundee flax spinners were walking to their beautiful residences in Broughty Ferry, about four miles east and as usual strolled along the docks. per line sailing vessels trading with Dundee in Indian products, principally grain. linseed, etc., and on this particular Saturday one of these vessels was discharging her miscellaneous cargo, and these canny Scots observed a fibre in some quantity on the dock and made inquiry as to what it was.

"They were told it was some Indian product that had been obtained in Bengal, and was suitable for the dunnage of ships. They examined the fibre a little more carefully and all thought it would be possible to spin the fibre on their flax machinery. The result was that Monday morning they made a bee line for the agents of the ship and asked what they were going to do with this waste material.

"They got the reply. 'We propose dumping it into the river,' and when they expressed a wish to experiment with it they were told they could cart it away from the dock and were welcome to it if they paid the cartage. Thus the jute industry started-for the fiber turned out to be nothing less than what we know commercially today as jute.' "-Exchange.

Bee Line.

A soldier on guard was questioned as to his knowledge of his duties. "You know your duty here, do you, "Yes, sir."

"Well, now, suppose they should open on you with shells and musketry, what would you do?" "Form a line, sir."

"What! One man form a line?" "Yes, sir; form a bee line for camp, sir."-New York American.

The Matter of Length and How to Tie a Bowknot That Will Hold.

A shoestring is "six-fourths" long when one does not specify the length required. "Six-fourths of what?" is likely to be the question put by the When a man buys a new pair of

Sunshine and Dust.

There is more dust in the places filuminated by the sun's rays than in those which we call shady. If you look along a beam of light as it streams through a window or a chink in the door you will see innumerable dust particles dancing about in the light. You will be told by most persons that there is just as much dust in the non illuminated parts of the room as in the more favored spaces, but you cannot see the particles because the rays do not fall directly upon them. You will think that this is eminently plausible. but it is not the case. The sun falling upon the air creates irregular currents. and these currents stir up the dust and collect it in layers along the line of light; hence there is more dust where the sun shines than elsewhere.-Ex-

Thomas Taggart. Democratic national committeeman; Mayor Joseph E. Bell of Indianapolis, Samuel Parrott, chief of police, and 125 other city officials, appointees and employes were indicted by the Marion county grand jury for alleged conspiracy to violate the election laws at the county primary in May and the general election in November, 1914, the action was evidently not unexpected by the majority of the men involved, for the work of furnishing bonds ranging from $2,-500 to $10,000 and engaging counsel came almost simultaneously.

Prominent Republicans are among the bondsmen. Charles W. Miller. former United States district attorney here, is one of a number of prominent lawyers to represent the defendants. Neither Mr. Taggart nor Mr. Bell would discuss the indictments, and the others involved were similarly reticent. Judge Collins of criminal court said that the question of arraigning the defendants in the election conspiracy cases would not be taken up until next week.

The indictments created a sensation. While it has been rumored on the streets for some time that a number of men were to be indicted as a result of an investigation of the last election, it was not thought men so high in political councils would be included. Not more than a dozen spectators were in court when the grand jurors, accompanied by Alvah J. Rucker, prosecutor, submitted the report. The others indicted included election officials, ward and precinct leaders. workers at the polls and voters.

He scuffed up the steps, unlocked the door in an uncertain way, and there was no longer any doubt of what wanded: would happen.

Mrs. Bowser greeted him pleasantly, but he had nothing to say. She led the way down to the dining room, and he followed without a word. She had a few little extras for dinner, but he hardly tasted the meal. He would sip at his coffee and sigh; then he would take a mouthful of potato and sigh some more; then he would look fixedly at the beefsteak, and the tears almost started from his eyes.

Mrs. Bowser was not alarmed. She had seen just such fits before. She knew what would happen as soon as they reached the sitting room, but she did not let it interfere with her appetite. Although he gazed at her with reproaches in his looks, she chattered away about trifles until the meal was finished and didn't seem to notice that he wasn't enjoying himself. It was only when they had got seated for the

"Look at this blamed old collar!" he thundered as he rose up. "Do you see how it's raveled out on the edges? Do you see that even a longshoreman would be ashamed to wear it?"

"I see it. Mr. Bowser. Yesterday I hunted up a lot of your old collars and

She rose and walked over to him and unbuttoned his vest and threw it open. Only one suspender was in sight. She pulled off his cost and found the other dangling down his back. For a moment he was beaten; then he flushed There are some wives who weep and up and exclaimed:

Quarrel of Squire Bull and His Son

An Old Time Fourth of July Allegory

Jonathan

By JAMES KIRKE PAULDING

OHN BULL was a choleric old fellow who held a good manor in the middle of a great mill pond and which by reason of its being quite surrounded by water was generally called Bullock island. Bull was an ingenious man, an exceedingly good blacksmith, a dexterous cutler and a notable weaver besides. He also brewed capital porter, ale and small beer and was, in fact, a sort of Jack-of-all-trades and good at each.

In addition to these he was a hearty fellow, a jolly companion and passably honest as the times went. But what tarnished all these qualities was an exceedingly quarrelsome, overbearing disposition, which was always getting him into some scrape or other.

The truth is he never heard of a quarrel going on among his neighbors but his fingers itched to take a part in it, so that he was hardly ever seen without a broken head, a black eye or a bloody nose.

Such was Squire Bill, as he was commonly called by the country people, his neighbors-one of those odd, testy, grumbling, boasting old codgers that never get credit for what they are because they are always pretending to be what they are not. The squire was as tight a hand to deal with indoors as out, sometimes treating his family as if they were not the same flesh and blood when they happened to differ with him in certain matters.

One day he got into a dispute with nis youngest son, Jonathan, who was familiarly called Brother Jonathan. He fell upon him and beat him soundly. After this he made the house so disagreeable to him that Jonathan, though as hard as a pine knot and as tough as leather, could bear it no longer.

Taking his gun and his ax, he put himself into a boat and paddled over the mill pond to some new lands to which the squire pretended to have some sort of claim. Jonathan intended to settle the lands. When he got over he found that the land was quite in a state of nature, covered with wood and inhabited only by wild beasts.

But, being a lad of spirit, he took his ax on one shoulder and his gun on the other, marched into the thickest of the wood and, clearing a place, built a log hut. Pursuing his labors and handling his ax like a notable woodman, he in a few years cleared the land, which he laid out into thirteen good farms, and building himself a arge house, which he partly finished,

But Squire Bull, who was getting old will have a conference with Colonel and stingy and besides was in great E. M. House there tomorrow. He wind want of money on account of his havthen go on to his summer home at ing lately been made to pay heavy damages for assaulting his neighbors and breaking their heads-the squire. I say, finding Jonathan was getting well to do in the world, began to be very much troubled about his welfare. So he demanded that Jonathan should pay him a good rent for the land which he had cleared and made good for some-

He made up I know not what claim against him and under different pretenses managed to pocket all Jonabelongs to the reserve forces of the than's honest gains. In fact, the poor lad had not a shilling left for holiday occasions, and had it not been for the filial respect he felt for the old man he would certainly have refused to submit to such impositions. But for all this in a little time Jonathan grew up to be very large for his age and became a tall, stout, double jointed, broad footed cub of a fellow, awkward in his gait and simple in his appearance, but having a lively, shrewd look and giving the promise of great strength when he should get his царарарарарарарарарарарарарарарара declared he was John's own boy, a true chip of the old block. Like the old squire, he was apt to be blustering and saucy, but in the main was a peaceable sort of careless fellow that would quarrel with nobody if you only let him alone. He used to dress in homespun trousers and always wore a linsey woolsey coat, the sleeves of which were so short that his hand and wrist came out beyond them, looking like a shoulder of mutton. All of which was in consequence of his growing so fast that he outgrew his clothes.

While Jonathan was coming up in this way Bull kept on picking his pockets of every penny put into them till at last one day when the squire was even more than usually pressing in his demands, which he accompanied with threats, Jonathan started up in a passion and threw the teakettle at the old man's head.

The choleric Bull was thereupon exceedingly enraged and, after calling the poor lad an undutiful, ungrateful, rebellious rascal, seized him by the collar, and forthwith a furious scuffle ensued. This lasted a long time, for the squire, though in years, was a capital boxer. At last, however, Jonathan got him under and before he would let him up made him sign a paper giving up all claim to the farms and acknowledging the fee simple to be in Jonathan

What precious associations cluster around our flag! Not alone have our fathers set up this banner in the name of God over the well won battlefields of the Revolution and over the cities and towns which they rescued from despotic rule, but think where also their descendants have carried it and raised it in conquest or protection! Through what clouds of dust and smoke has it passed, what storms of shot and shell, what scenes of fire and blood-not only at Saratoga, at Monmouth and at Yorktown, but at Lundy's Lane and New Orleans, at Buena Vista and Chapultepec! It is the same glorious old flag which, inscribed with the dying words of Law, nee, "Don't give up the ship." was hoisted on Lake Erie by Commodore Perry just on the eve of his great naval victory; the same old flag which our great chieftain bore in triumph to the proud city of the Aztecs and planted upon the heights of her national palace. Brave hands raised it above the eternal regions of ice in the Arctic seas and have set it up on the summits of the lofty mountains of the distant west.

Where has it not gone, the pride of its friends and the terror of its foes? What countries and what seas has it not visited? Where has not the American citizen been able to stand beneath its guardian folds and defy the world? With what joy and exultation seamen and tourists have gazed upon its stars and stripes, read in it the history of their nation's glory, received from it the full sense of security and drawn from' it the inspirations of patriotism! By it how many have sworn fealty to their country!

What bursts of magnificent eloquence it has called forth from Webster and from Everett, what lyric strains of poetry from Drake and Holmes! How many heroes its folds have covered in death! How many have lived for it, and how many have died for it! How many, living and dying, have said in their enthusiastic devotion to its honor, like that young wounded sufferer in the streets of Baltimore, "Oh, the flag-the stars and stripes!" And wherever that flag has gone it has been the herald of a better day; it has been the pledge of freedom, of justice, of order. of civilization and of Christianity. Tyrants only have hated it, and the enemies of mankind alone have trampled it to the earth. All who sigh for the triumph of truth and righteousness love and salute it.-Rev. Albert B. Putnam.

The most notable feature of the fireworks business, dealers say, has been the creation of a demand in recent years for fireworks in the south for use on July 4. The fact that the south is beginning to take up in the conventional way the celebration of the nation's birth points very strongly, they believe, to the undermining of the last sectional differences. The demand this year has been far larger than ever before, they say. Newspaper Advertising

Goes direct to the people and the people constitute the buying public. Newspaper advertising not only talks but it emphasizes; it has the undivided attention of the reader and covers a field no salesman can hope to reach. There are many styles in newspaper advertising and the small announcement, which costs only five cents, is just as effective in its way as the larger one, which costs proportionately more. The benefits to be derived can not be measured by the size of the ad, for the very good reason that the small, inexpensive anonuncement invariably proves effective. Newspaper advertising costs from five cents up to any price the advertiser desires to pay.

A FOURTH OF JULY SEN-TIMENT.

CONTEMPLATE the condition of that country of which you form an important part. Consider its government, uniting in one bond of common interest and general protection so many different states, giving to all their inhabitants the proud title of American citizens, protecting their commerce, securing their literature and their arts, facilitating their intercommunication, defending their frontiers and making their name respected in the remotest parts of the earth. Consider the extent of territory, its increasing and happy population, its advance in arts which render life agreeable and the sciences which elevate the mind. See education spreading the lights of religion, morality and general information into every cottage in this wide extent of our territories and states. Behold it as the asylum where the wretched and the oppressed find a refuge and support! Look on this picture of happiness and honor and say, "We, too, are citizens of
